CONTENTS

Perspectives on African American Literature

vii Introduction
—John Zheng

Essays

9 Uncle Tom’s Children Revisited
—Jerry W. Ward, Jr.

12 The Integral Function of Marxist Doctrine in Richard Wright’s “Fire and Cloud”
—Larry Marshall Sams

19 Zen Buddhism in Richard Wright’s Haiku
—Toru Kiuchi

33 “The rifle bullet”: African American History in Richard Wright’s Unpublished Haiku
—Meta L. Schettler

45 The Cultural Politics of Paul Robeson and Richard Wright: Theorizing the African Diaspora
—Floyd W. Hayes, III

61 Discovering Sterling Plumpp: A Familiar Voice
—Janice Tuck Lively

68 Telling the Geography of His Horn: Modal Strategies in the Poetry of Sterling Plumpp
—Hermine Pinson

91 “His Story Intersecting with My Own”: Miscegenation as History in Natasha Trethewey’s Native Guard
—Jee Eun Kim

96 Imagining a Generous Reader: The Fiction of Tayari Jones
—Susan Allen Ford
100 Lord of Allusions: Reading Percival Everett’s Erasure Through African American Literary History
—Tamara Powell

108 Can a “Last Comic Standing” Finally Rescue Little Black Sambo from the Jungle?
—Neal A. Lester

Conversations

140 Of Transmissions and Translations / Blues and the Poetry of Sterling D. Plumpp: A Conversation with John Edgar Wideman
—Michael Antonucci and John Edgar Wideman

148 A Conversation on Richard Wright
—Diane Williams and Jerry W. Ward, Jr.

161 A Conversation with Tayari Jones
—John Quinn

Reviews

165 Reading Against the Patriarchal Grain: Richard Wright’s A Father’s Law
—Jerry W. Ward, Jr.

169 History and Time in Natasha Trethewey’s Native Guard
—Theodore Haddin

172 A Bridge through Time: Natasha Trethewey’s Native Guard
—Ben Huang

Notes

175 Contributors’ Notes